Report narrative

On March 28, 2012 at approximately 2159 hours I, Ranger Craig R. JOHNSON, was off duty and received a phone call at my residence from Vector Security in reference to an intrusion alarm at the Jackson Shrine. Vector went on to inform me that the Zone 4 motion detector had been activated which monitors the "waiting room" of the structure. I gave Vector my park issued cell phone number and asked that they call me if they had other zone activations for the building. They informed me that they would. I then contacted Ranger Regina CARRICO at her residence as to inform her of my call out as a safety precaution and asked her to monitor the park radio. She said she would.

On scene I exited my patrol car and illuminated the building with my spot and overhead lights on my patrol car. Jackson Shrine is extremely dark and has no security lighting. In addition, due to the layout of the structure ample hiding spots can be obtained around the perimeter in dense brush and trees. At a distance I could see that the window to the waiting room looked tampered with. I called CARRICO on my cell phone and while utilizing a Bluetooth hands free connection keep her on the phone while I investigated further. Upon closer observation I could see that forced entry of some type had been attempted to the building by noticing several that several lower glass panes had been shattered. I informed CARRICO of my findings and quickly exited the area on foot to my patrol car. I then drove to the entrance gate of the site and contacted the Caroline County Sheriff's Department to assist me in clearing the building.

In approximately 20 minutes Deputy Sheriff S.A BUTNER arrived on the scene and assisted me in performing a building search of the Jackson Shrine. Other than the broken window we found no other signs of forced entry and felt no government property had been taken from the building. BUTNER cleared the area and I waited for CARRICO to arrive as to continue the NPS investigation.

When CARRICO arrived I took photos of the damage while she contacted NPS Maintenance Supervisor John SEARS to inform of the damage. SEARS contacted NPS maintained restoration specialist John STODDARD and had him respond to the scene. At approximately 1230 hours STODDARD arrived on scene and began the process of temporally boarding the window until he could repair the damage in the morning. While examining the window STODDARD observed that the cross members of the window that hold the glass in place appeared to have been sawed with some sort of small hand saw. I took photos and documented this damage. All NPS personnel cleared the scene at 0200 hours.

On March 29, 2012 at approximately 1000 hours I, Ranger Craig R. JOHNSON, met at the Jackson Shrine with NPS Cultural Resource Manager Eric MINK and NPS Historian Frank O'REILLY. MINK documented the damage to the structure and then he and O'REILLY performed a thorough inspection of the Shrine looking for any missing items, artifacts or damage. The only damage to the structure was the window and the glass associated with the break in the night before. All artifacts, supplies and eastern book store materials seemed to be in place. The donation box, which was in the historian office, was covered and seemed to be in place and not tampered with. STODDARD was at the Shrine working on the building when I arrived and showed me a small saw blade that he had found under the remains of glass from the break-in. I photographed and collected the saw blade for the case. Matter under investigation.
